NASA testing subject of scoping meeting

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

NASA held its first scoping meeting Tuesday, concerning the possibility of resuming advanced propulsion engine testing night.

The meeting was the first of two to be held on the subject. The second will be following the environmental impact study and will most likely be held sometime in May.

More than 50 people were in attendance, but only six spoke. Of the six, four were for the program, one had additional questions and one was against.

Robert Bruce, Director of the Advanced Propulsion Technology Program, said the reason that the President and Congress are developing this program is because of the need for a new. lower cost, more reliable, reusable, higher efficiency space vehicle, which will ultimately replace the space shuttle by the year 2012. He said there would be several prototypes built before a single one is settled upon.

This program is being coordinated by NASA and the Department of Defense, but the space shuttle will continue to be launched until a new vehicle developed.

This program is NASA's highest priority right now. Bruce said.

The testing, that would take place at John C. Stennis Space Center, would not begin until sometime in 1996, Bruce said, and the fuels used would be the same types as were tested with the Apollo program.

Citizens were told at the meeting that not many new jobs

Bay residents visit oak slated for renovation of Constitution

BY CHARLEE MARSHALL When David Reynolds and his wife Kate went back East to attend a class reunion, they made a side trip to check on an old friend.

During a lull in their busy schedule of weekend activities they visited the Charlestown Navy yard in Charlestown, Mass., to check on a former resident of Bay St. Louis, an ancient live oak that once resided on Beach Boulevard.

The Seabees from the Naval Mobile Construction Battalion in Gulfport cut and sectioned the tree to be part of a very important project. The wood will be used in the renovation of

Casino alternatives eyed

BY MARY G. SEILEY

State Gaming Commission officials recently rejected conceptual plans for the proposed Casino World development at Diamondhead:

But the casino's chief operating officer, Charles Reddien, said Monday there are two "blatantly legal" alternative designs in the wings.

Reddien said the rejected plans were "absolutely optimal from an environmental standpoint." The problem was how-ever, the design left the casinos at a location that the commission deemed inland, and, therefore, illegal under state dockside gaming laws.

The school board also heard from several parents during the course of the meeting.

Donelle Giveans tried once again to get her daughter's school bus route changed to accommodate her daughter. Mary Rorabaugh and Elizabeth Kimmel represented a group of parents concerned about the condition of the plumbing in the girls' bathrooms, leaking classentrances and questionable playground safety at North Bay Elementary School. The mother of a child hurt on the playground at North Bay advised them on the injury and the situation that caused it. Still another parent, Deborah Rushing, wanted to know when parents would be invited to review the plans for expansion at the school.

HHS teacher earns presidential award education. The announcement was made from the White House, in October, that 215 teachers nationwide would be receiving the prestigious award for science and mathematics teachers. Burton was then presented with a $100 grant on Nov. 4 in Jackson from South Central Bell and will receive a $7,500 in March, which she can spend over the next three years in her classroom, any way that she chooses.

Six teachers, three from the elementary level and three from the secondary level, in math and science were chosen on the state level and then went on to the national level.

Just a few of Burton's accomplishments that qualified her for this prestigious honor, were that she has written and won more than $85,000 in grant monies for the district, has conducted science teacher training sessions on the local, state and national level and for the past three years has coordinated the Hancock County Professional Development Academy for the district.

Burton said that the grant writing has given her an outlet for a talent that she never knew that she had.

She added that the support of Hancock County Superintendent Myrna Bourgeois and Dr. Gaynell Roberts, helped her to successfully write the grants and pursue a leadership role in the district.

yours ago, St. Augus-uron needed a catalyst propel it toward the renovation necessary to celebrate its sesquicentennial. That catalyst was an artist who came accidentally and stayed just long enough to paint the interior. Parts of St. Augustine's main buildings were in extensive disrepair a bit over two years ago. Help from within was hard to come by, and we could not afford the kind of professional work which would have put us on solid ground again.

So it was with a sigh of relief that a middle-aged man came to us virtually out of nowhere. Although he had worked in a couple of churches around the country, he did not have a home nor any place to use his varied talents.

With some preoccupation, since he was a stranger, I took him in and turned him loose on several projects in the church and hall. Happily, his amount of energy and abilities belied the slow, labored shuffle of his feet.

Then disaster struck. He disappeared for two weeks, finally calling in to surrender himself. A sad sight he was, being awakened in the van, being handcuffed and driven off to the police station full of cocaine.

Eerily, he had made his appearance precisely when needed and had remained sober just long enough to accomplish the major part of the work he was assigned to do about the

Once more, someone had made the scene at precisely the time he was needed, and stayed sober just long enough to complete the important task at hand. Eerie, to say the least.

Thus it has always been that God makes an appearance, if not directly, then through angels, which we translate as messengers. This is but a continuation of the incarnation:

"In times past, God spoke in fragmentary and varied ways to our fathers through the prophets. In this, the final age, he has spoken to us through a Son" (Heb. 1: 1-2).

The ever-ancient, ever-new message of Christmas is, God works in us through a dazzling variety of people and things.

Gaming Commission director Paul Harvey said Monday the initial design simply "didn't pass the jiggle test" for a dock-side operation. "The way they designed it, it would be landbased," Harvey said.

Still, Harvey said the initial rejection of the siting plan shouldn't be viewed as a major setback for the proposed development. "It's not a big deal ... They came in and ran a concept by us," said Harvey. "We said that concept ... is not a legal site.'

Tisdale assured the parents making complaints about conditions at North Bay that efforts to correct the problems are already in motion. Several inches of sand had been dumped over the asphalt on the playground and future plans are to break it up and remove it, he said.

He told them a facilities study had been made to identify needs for repairs and replacements in the Bay-Waveland School System and work was already underway.

Administrative assistant Billy Rhodes said he was already aware of the problems the parents had pointed out.

"As soon as we're finished with the high school, we will go to North Bay," he told the Rorabaugh said she had trouble accepting his response when he told them that the toilets in the girls' bathrooms were all functional. She said she had been working with Girl Scouts at the school last weekend and took notice of the plumbing problems and out-of-order signs posted on a couple of the doors.

The concerned parents were invited to come back to the meeting in January to review improvements that have been made by that time.

Kevin Fitzpatrick, the architect hired to work on the expansion at North Bay and Waveland Elementary, discussed the intense pace of the building project in terms of the preparation time involved. In order to meet the state deadline of Jan. 10 for submitting the proposed building plans, he would have to really push to get them ready. He told the board he was uncomfortable with the timetable given him and that he would be better able to design a more workable design at Waveland Elementary if he had more

He advised the board that soil borings need to be made at both schools so that the weight bearing properties of the ground can be analyzed. The board voted to go ahead with the soil borings and bid the construction in two separate packages, with North Bay's expansion plans to be ready for the January deadline and Waveland's to follow in February.

The board also wrestled with the problem of smoking at school and how to become a smoke-free environment, as an example for students, while allowing teachers who smoke to exercise their rights. Discussed was an idea of having them smoke in their vehicles during planning periods, lunch time or breaks.

Dr. Sherry Ponder presented information on the concept and practice of inclusion when working with children who need special education. She advised members on the success rate of teaching these students in the least restrictive environment and said it often results in model behavior when they are taught in classroom situations.

The board discussed and voted on a number of items during the four-hour meeting. They amended the 1994-95 budget; discussed again the need for a junior varsity soccer program; approved the purchase of two new Ford trucks; rejected bids for field house additions and baseball dugouts and voted to readvertise for bids; approved resignations and terminations of school personnel; approved the transfer of several students and approved a field trip for art

I received a joyful telephone call from J.D. (Big John) Rutherford, Hancock County Blood Bank chairman, who was reporting on last week's Red Cross blood

Rutherford said there were 106 who showed up with 95 units of blood being collected.

Big John said it has been a very long time since a drawing was held when 95 or more units was collected. It takes a lot of help to do a blood drawing, in addition to having those donate blood.

Rutherford also wants to thank each and everyone who donated blood, along with those who assisted with the drive.

Have you noticed the new Christmas banners along some of the streets in Bay St. Louis?

They look very good and so do the Christmas flags along Highway 90 in Bay St. Louis at the intersections on the light poles.

The light poles have sure come in for some good use other than their original function.

While on the subject of Christmas decorations, I have noticed several very good displays in the Bay-Waveland and Diamondhead areas.

Some folks place a lot of expense and effort in doing Christmas decorations.

The day the man from the North Pole visits young boys and girls is fast approaching.

I have noticed about town how 'good' young boys and girls appear to be at this time of year. Many parents feel they should be the same throughout the year.

Oh! How to be young again! Just wishful thinking on my part, and I know there are others feeling the same

When I was a youngster, this was the time of year when my three brothers and I would begin scouting the woods for a prospective Christmas tree. Christmas Eve was the time our tree would be decorated, after being cut earlier in the day. Yes, it was a pine tree. We even added extra branches at times to the tree we would select.

It was from the floor to ceiling, some ten feet tall and held hundreds of ornaments, tinsel and lights.

The smell of pine was throughout our home for the Christmas season.

My mother probably still has a few ornaments from my first Christmas tree some ?? years ago.

needed votes to bring fiscal sanity back to deficit reduction. I few years Congress and the Administration have produced budgets that have been too low on spending cuts, too high on taxes and too dependent on defense cuts.

During the 102nd and 103rd Congress we came pretty close to passing a Balanced Budget Amendment. However, it seems as if each time the bill makes it to the house floor for a vote, it fails by only a handful of votes.

As a strong advocate of a balanced budget, and original cosponsor of the Balanced Budget Amendment, I am look- budget, which is very close to ing forward to pushing this the two-thirds necessary. andmark legislation during the upcoming 104th Congress.

The new majority leadership has assured the American people that big budget cuts will be one of the first items found on our legislative agenda come January.

The Balanced Budget Amendment would amend the Constitution of the United States to require the President to submit a Balanced Budget to the Congress. And Congress

It's going to be close, but the would have to pass a budget 104th Congress should have the that spends no more than that year's total revenues.

As a city councilman and firmly believe that in the past Mississippi state senator, I was required by law to spend no more than was collected in taxes. What an excellent law. Quite frankly, if it had been part of the U.S. Constitution our nation would not be squandering more than $300 billion a year in interest on the national debt.

The solution basically rests in the lap of Congress. State legislatures in the past have been very receptive to a balanced federal budget. Over the past two decades close to 30 states have called for a constitutional convention on a balanced budget must begin with Congress. Everyone in Washington talks about the deficit, but few are willing to make the tough choices required to reduce it.

To me, it is not a difficult decision. Given the huge financial problems that we as a nation now face, a growing $4.7 trillion national debt and $203 billion annual deficit, it's time for some fiscal sanity.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Class of '55 at Jones College was at time of change

A rather remarkable gettogether is going to be held next October in Ellisville when the Jones Community College (then Junior College) Class of 1955 holds its 40th reunion.

Concomitant with that reunion will be an observance of the Jones Jr. College football team playing in the "Little Rose Bowl" against Compton (Calif.) Junior College in 1955, an occasion that holds a unique milestone in the social history of Mississippi.

Under tremendous pressure, as well as threats, to stay home and not play, because Compton's team included eight black players, the little Mississippi junior college went out to Pasadena, Calif. and performed before 57,000 spectators in the yawning Rose Bowl, losing 22-13.

A Mississippi just entering in 1955 into what would become an emotional binge in the defense of a dying institution segregation — newspapers and politicians in the state became shrilly jingoistic with threats of reprisal against the school if Jones' all-white team played against the black athletes form Compton. Some legislators even threatened to stop state funds going to the junior college.

Among the worst castigators of the tiny Jones County school was Fred Sullens, the vituperative editor of the Jackson Daily News, who led the chorus for cutting out state funding for the junior college.

But one sturdy figure was standing on the side of Jones Jr. College — its president, Dr. J. B. Young. The commitment to play Compton for the national junior college championship had been made, he said, and Jones would not back down. So the team went, along with the college's band, defying the nihilistic voices who condemned it as an act of treachery against the state's segregated way of life.

But now fast-forward to next October when members of the 1955 Jones college team will be on hand for the 40th reunion of their class to commemorate the 1955 trip to play in Pasadena for the junior college championship.

That occasion is being turned into an even bigger event because not only will the white players for Jones who are still living be present, but also five of the eight living black players for Compton, who will be special guests, together with a number of their white teammates.

The Californians will be fetted at the Jones homecoming luncheon and parade, and the tab for the black players' expenses will be picked up by a Mississippi bank.

The idea that this could be turned into an event of redemption (and relatedly a publicity coup) originated with Earle Johnston, the retired Forest Weekly newspaper editorturned-author. Johnston had a chapter in his book Mississippi's Defiant Years, about the whole Jones Jr. College episode, and it occurred to him last year that a 40th anniversary of it would be coming up in 1995. He sold the idea to Jones Community College officials of specially inviting the still-living black players from Compton to join in homecoming and volunteered to help raise expense money for them.

Johnston went further to contact the public information director at Compton College (no longer called "Jr.") who enthusiastically offered to send out news releases seeking assistance in locating the eight black players from 1955.

They were promptly traced down - three had passed away - and the five remaining still living in California eagerly agreed to make the journey to celebrate the burial of prejudice with their one-time gridiron foes in Mississippi.

Poetically, a horn tooter in the Jones Jr. College band back then was Terrell Tisdale, who today is president of Jones Community College. He still remembers the courage of his predecessor, J. B. Young, who died four years ago at age 87: "He stood up better than some of us might do today." Johnston, who says his hometown bank, Farmers and Merchants of Forest with an affiliate will pick up the expenses of the five African-American players, is overjoyed at how the event is shaping up. So are the Los Angeles Times and the Long Beach Press Telegraph which have already carried long stories about the forthcoming reunion.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

A Weekly Editorial From Mississippi Economic Council

Mississippi should choose "school choice"

It doesn't require a battery of government tests to conclude that the quality of education greatly affects the economic climate of a state. Therefore, creating better Mississippi schools will always be one of the Mississippi Economic Council's highest priorities.

In many ways, the business community and the education community are quite similar. Business must provide consumers with a quality product or service in order to be successful and make a profit. An education system also has its consumers — students and parents — who demand quality schools and quality learning experience. The education "profit" comes when the students graduate and use that education as contributors to society.

The business stimulant for quality and profit is competition. It's a stimulant MEC believes would work as well for Mississippi's schools. Competition would serve as an incentive for schools and school districts to provide students and parents with the highest quality learning "product" possible.

To create such competition,

MEC — the state's largest association of business, industrial and professional leaders advocates school choice.

MEC believes parents should be given the choice of enrolling their children in any public school in any school district, consistent with federal guidelines, with state funds to follow the student.

School choice gives parents the control they deserve to have over their children's education.

All parents want only the best for their children. School choice would give parents the power to provide the best for their children's education and would give schools greater incentive to meet parental expectations.

The following ideas are from consumers who made it to the New Year without dragging so much of the old year with them.

To tighten up her "spendthrift" Christmas one consumer needed ammunition. She inventoried her children's gifts from last Christmas, writing down costs and estimating the time her children played with each.

She compared that to the amount of time her husband worked to pay for each toy. A few board games and puzzles turned out to be good boys. Otherwise, he worked longer to pay for the toys than the children played with them. She now uses this criteria for choosing toys and finds that most no longer measure up. Most of those that do are the classics that have survived for generations.

Below are additional ideas: * Make a holiday budget and stick to it. Include gifts, decorations, holiday clothes and food. Make revisions until the total dollar amount is affordable.

Transfer credit balances to lower finance charges. Beware of "teaser" rates that are cheaper for only a few months. Look for an even better deal at banks or credit unions. Avoid charging until transferred balances are paid.

* Use grace periods for a month of free money. But watch out for retroactive interest if balances are not paid in one billing cycle.

Avoid the crowds. No one makes wise decisions after standing in lines and waiting on parking spaces and sales people

* Buy a roll of brown packing paper and a wide plaid ribbon on a spool instead of holiday paper. For an extra touch get the kids involved. Let them make red and green handprints all over the paper. When you don't have a box, use inexpensive netting for wrap.

* Give a theme basket gift or a variation on that idea. For the cook give a loaf pan, recipes and a few select ingredients like nuts and spices. To the gardener give a clay pot filled with fertilizer, trowel, gloves, seeds and bug spray.

Fishermen get bait, a hat and fishing line. A more economical twist is a food basket — homemade salsa with chips and beverages, ingredients for jambalaya or gumbo, or homemade jams, jellies and pickle.

* Give baked goods and homemade candy to co-workers and friends. They are a special treat for those who have little time to cook themselves. (Extras are welcome at the Consumer Management Center). If you don't cook, try potted plants that you have grown or at least potted in an attractive container.

* For the person with everything, give a donation in their honor to the charity they would

* Try giving yourself instead of your money. Volunteer at a food pantry or shelter this year. The joy created more than equals hundreds of dollars worth of gifts.

Harmful myths haunt poinsettias

By Bethany L. Waldrop MSU Ag Communications for their brilliant colors, have long been haunted by poinsettia phobia.

A recent national poll indicated half of Americans still mistakenly believe this symbol of the holiday season is poisonous to humans.

"It's a testament to the persistence of myths," said Paul Bachman, marketing chairman of the Society of American Florists.

"Ponsettias simply are not toxic. That was proven 23 years ago in scientific tests, and we want to set the record straight.'

That's not to say you should eat one, though. Like other nonfood items, if eaten, the poinsettia may cause some stomach discomfort — but nothing more.

Dr. David Tatum, state extension nursery specialist at Mississippi State University, said the haunting poinsettia myth should be laid to rest.

"Christmas wouldn't be the same without beautiful poinsettias," Tatum said. "Many people don't realize that centuries ago, the Aztecs used the colorful leaves, or bracts, to make reddish-purple dyes, and they used the milky juice in medicine to combat fever."

The original source of poinsettia phobia has its roots in an unfounded story form 1919. For nearly eight decades, the story was an army officer's 2-year-old child allegedly died after eating a poinsettia leaf. While the story was never proven with medical or scientific facts, it has taken a life of its own. Despite its continued circulation, the myth of the poinsettia is gradually losing

"It may just have to run its course," Bachman said. "But we do want people to know there's absolutely no reason to miss out on this favorite holiday plant."

Poinsettias are native to Mexico, and were first cultivated in the present-day region of Taxco. The plant the Aztecs called "Cuetlaxochitl" symbolized purity and also had many practical uses.

The red poinsettias are the most popular, but with the variety of choices in color, size and texture, you can find the perfect poinsettia for every mood, color scheme and pocketbook," Tatum said.

Poinsettias now are available in almost every color of the rainbow in both solids and marbled Poinsettias, prized through-patterns. Popular colors include white, burgundy, gold, lemon yellow, ivory, pink and keep

While poinsettias pose no threat to humans, Dr. Gerald Radde, small animal veterinarian at MSU's College of Veterinary Medicine, said watching pets around poinsettias is a good idea.

"If your pet eats part of a poinsettia, the plant's sap might make the animal a little sick," Radde said. "The sap is not deadly to pets, but it could cause foaming at the mouth or vomiting."

To keep poinsettias healthy and beautiful for months, Tatum suggested:

 Look for tightly clustered, small, central flowers with crisp, bright foliage when selecting a poinsettia. • Water the plant thoroughly when surface soil is dry to the touch. Discard excess water from the potted plant's saucer. Keep the plant in a temperature range of 60 degrees during the night and 72 degrees during the day to prolong color. High humidity is preferable for the plants.

Avoid placing the plant near cold drafts or near warm air vents.

"The poinsettia is a very 'forgiving' plant — it can take a lot of neglect," Tatum said. "But with a little attention, your poinsettia can remain beautiful even after the holiday season has passed."

MY THOUGHTS

Tis the season . . . be jolly, be healthy, be happy, be safe, be warm. Love one another.

Decorations add hazards to home

By Anna Minor MSU Ag Communications

Holiday decorations add a special touch to the Christmas season, but they often provide a serious side effect - fire hazards.

Dr. Frances Graham, extension housing specialist at Mississippi State University, said the holidays require extra caution to void fire hazards.

Fires can start in homes with the extra lights and decorations if people do not observe fire safety rules" Graham said. One of the main fire hazards during the holidays is the Christmas tree. "A dry tree can burn in less than a minute so water them daily to keep them as fresh as possible," Graham said.

Graham encouraged people to avoid putting a live tree up too soon. After the holidays, the tree should be taken down as quickly as possible. After a tree is cut or bought from a lot, cut an inch of the trunk from the base of the tree. Place the tree in the tree stand with a sand and water mixture. Trees also should not be placed directly in the draft from the heating system," Graham said. "This will tend to dry out the tree very quickly.

Decorations on the tree also can cause fires. Examine all items carefully before placing them on the tree.

"Check all sockets, wiring and bulbs before putting lights on the tree," Graham said. "Even small breaks in the wiring can ignite the tree." Graham encouraged people to follow the manufacturer's recommendations for the number of lights on each circuit to avoid overloading circuits.

"Electric lights should not be used on metallic trees since damaged lights may cause the tree to become charged with electricity," Graham said.

Plastic icicles and other flammable items, such as candles, should not be used on "Any potentially flammable or breakable decorations should be placed out of reach of children and pets for their protection," Graham said.

When decorating outside, Graham urged the use of lights specified for exterior purposes. These lights have the necessary wiring and insulation to protect against the weather.

After the holidays, dispose of wrapping paper and trees properly.

"Never throw wrapping paper or Christmas trees into a fireplace," Graham said. "Trees burn with explosive violence, and the paper will ignite quickly, usually by flying up the chimney and possibly igniting the roof."

An aid to locating vital records

Vital records are just that . . . vital. We need access to them.

In this age of bureaucratic documentation, everyone has need of copies of records of birth, death, marriage or divorce. An application for benefits from the Veterans Administration or Social Security, a passport or marriage license requires not only the information in the records but usually copies of the records themselves.

All these records are stored permanently by municipalities. counties, states and the federal government. We all know this, but where each document is kept is frequently unknown.

The Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group, found there was little uniformity on where the records were available and the costs. In some states, birth records are kept by the city and in others by the county or state. To further complicate matters, often older records are held in different than current ones. In addition, the addresess where the records are kept are changed quite often.

The consumer group found many people had difficulty in locating the records they needed. Often it was necessary to make expensive long distance calls just to find out where to write, what information was required and how much money to send. For that reason CERC has been publishing a book entitled Where to Write for Vital Records which contains a stateby-state listing of the addresses and telephone numbers of the archive where each record can be found, the cost of a copy of the document and sample form letters containing all the information needed to get these and other vital documents. CERC has just released an updated edition. For those needing information from foreign countries, the book contains a list of government offices where you can get help in locating vital records kept in almost every country.

Even U.S. citizens born overseas, on a ship or aircraft can locate the place where their records are kept.

The organization found that many people have used previous editions to locate their family trees or roots. For those, the book includes information on the Family History Library of the Mormon Church. This library contains over 200,000 volumes of family history records and a list of almost a quarter-million people who are willing to share information to help you find your family roots.

To get a copy of this useful book, send $6.50 (plus $2 s&h) to Consumer Center-Documents, 350 Scotland Rd., Orange, N.J. 07050 or call are en 800-872-0121 with credit card. cycle.

This year RADM Paul G. Gafney II, head of the worldwide Naval Meteorology and Oceanography Command, will deliver over $1,000 worth of toys contributed by his staff to representatives of the Instructor Inspector Staff located aboard the Naval Construction Battalion Center in Gulfport and the Marine Corps Recruiting Office in Slidell, La.

The exchange will be held Friday, Dec. 16 at 2 p.m. in front of the Naval Meteorology and Oceanography Command Headquarters, 1020 Balch Boulevard at the Stennis Space Center.

Members of the media are invited to cover the event. Please contact Tom Fredian at (601) 688-4187 if you will be sending a representative(s).

The admiral's staff raised the money to purchase the toys and games through bake sales, cookouts, car washes and other fund raisers held throughout the year. In addition, many staff members donated new toys they purchased themselves.

Marine Corps Major Bill Resavy served as the staff's toy drive coordinator. Marines will distribute the Command's toys to the local community action committees and the Salvation Army for further delivery to needy children along the Mis-

A gift from your kitchen is a gift from the heart, it is said, especially in these days of "buyit-made-already." So, I'm busy as usual these days before Christmas, cooking up tasty bits for family and friends, to say "Merry Christmas" in a personal way.

One of my friends is famous in our group for her brownies, another for her fruitcakes, still another for her condiments and jellies. And so it goes, each one sharing his or her specialty with friends at Yuletide.

Pecans are so much a part of Christmas in the South, as well as elsewhere, that I always include pecan delicacies in my holiday cooking. One of my favorites all through the year, not iust at Christmas, (I always get number of requests at this time of year for this ever-soeasy recipe) is:

PECAN CONFECTIONS

(This recipe is said to have originated in colonial days in Williamsburg, Va. and was given to me some years ago by a longtime friend, Odile Carter).

1 egg white 1 cup light-brown sugar Dash of salt, say 1/8 tsp. 1 level Tblsp. flour

1 cup chopped pecans

It's ever so easy, and ever so delicious! Beat the egg white (I use a wire whisk) to a stiff froth, then add, very gradually, the cup of brown sugar (mixed with the flour and salt). Fold in the pecans, and drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheets, making sure to space them, as they spread in the bakA gift from the kitchen ing process. Bake in a slow oven (300 to 350 degrees) according to your oven.

Let cool before removing from cookie sheets. That's all there is to it. This makes one small batch, two dozen small cookies. You may double the batch, but I have found that, if I try to mix up more than two batches at a time, the mixture turns unwieldy, so I just keep making up one batch after another. Make them as tiny or large as you wish. You'll enjoy them, and so will the recipients.

If you prefer a "burnt sugar" taste, leave the cookies in the oven a bit longer, checking the bottoms so that they really don't burn up! One of my sons prefers these cookies almost overbaked, as he likes the burnt sugar taste. (So do I). And a couple of my grandsons prefer the cookies without the pecans so, I make them every which way, and they disappear

And, at the other end of the taste scene, are deviled pecans. another favorite of mine for giving and for munching. Just melt a stick of butter (or margarine) in a heavy skillet, add 4 cups of pecan halves, along with 4 tablespoons of Worcestershire sauce, a half to a whole tablespoon of Tabasco and a teaspoon of garlic salt (optional).

Mix well together, spread out in a large, flat pan or cookie sheet and toast for a half hour in a 350-degree oven, stirring about from time to time so that the pecans will be evenly toasted and seasoned. Drain well on paper towels.

Holidays require better security

By Anna Minor MSU Ag Communications

The holiday season ushers in a time of hustle and bustle for everyone, including burglars. But theft does not have to ruin this special time.

Dr. Frances Graham, extension housing specialist at Mississippi State University, said home and auto burglaries usually increase during the holidays.

"Theft tend to increase because people are not as careful with security as they usually are," Graham said. "They will leave packages in full view, the first step to theft such as in a car's back seat, which invites people to take them.'

Longer night hours also are a factor in the increase of burglaries during the holiday season. To reduce the chances of holiday theft, follow a few simple safety procedures.

When shopping, store packages out of view, such as in the trunk of a car.

"Never carry many packages at one time because this may encourage potential thieves to follow you to your car and steal the items," Graham said.

In the home, locking doors is prevention.

Locks are only as good as you want them to be," Graham said. "If you don't use your locks, they won't do any good."

Many homes are left unattended during the holidays, making them prime targets for home burglary.

"The key to preventing holiday burglaries while you are away is to make your home looked lived in every day," Graham said.

Graham offered the following tips for preventing home burglaries:

 Keep expensive items away from windows to avoid outside

Be a responsible party host

The holiday season has arrived. There will be more parties and celebrations than at any other time of the year but because of the increasing concern about drinking and driving, many people will welcome parties where the emphasis is on fun and food, not on the bar. It is the hosts' responsibility to protect their guests from the dangers of impaired driving. In fact, in many states hosts can be held liable if they serve alcohol to guests who later cause fatal or injury-causing crashes.

"There would be far fewer sad holiday traffic statistics if every host decided to prevent their friends from being injured or killed by causing an alcoholrelated crash," said Danon Jones, director of Public and Government Relations for AAA Mississippi.

"This holiday season, be a friend first. When tempted to offer your guests another drink, ask yourself if you are really doing them a favor. If guests leave under the influence of alcohol and shouldn't drive, perhaps you haven't been such a good friend after all.'

Following are some specific suggestions for hosts who will be giving a party during the holiday season:

* Don't force alcoholic drinks on guests and provide plenty of nonalcoholic alternatives.

* Serve protein-rich or starchy foods throughout the evening. This helps retard alcohol absorption and diverts attention from alcoholic drinks.

* Put away the alcohol and bring out coffee and desert before the hour grows late.

* Should guests overindulge, drive them home yourself, call a cab or let them stay over - just don't let them drive.

Remember, you may loose a friend that night, but you will have a better one in the morning — a friend who will love your party and live to tell about

National Seashore programs

Superintendent Jerry Eubanks invites park neighbors and visitors to stop by weekdays for special holiday programs between Christmas and New Year's Day. Join the Seashore's rangers and volunteers as they celebrate 'Nature's Gifts' with a week of movies, videos and slide shows.

If the kids are off from school; if the weather's too cold; or if you're just looking for something to do; stop by for hot coffee, tea, cookies and pretzels. Spend a few minutes discovering the very unique animals found in the skies, below the waves and along the shores of the Mississippi coast.

Between Monday and Friday, Dec. 26-30, a different program can be seen daily between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. On Monday, see National Geographic Society's The Living Ocean.'

For Tuesday, explore the underwater world of 'Sea

Wednesday has two special slide programs on 'Butterflies' scheduled for 11 a.m .and 2 p.m.

Thursday offers a look at the American Wolf with updates on the Horn Island Red Wolf project. Finally on Friday, we return to the sea with a look at those amazing cetaceans in National Geographic's 'Dolphins.'

These movies, videos and slide talks can all be seen at the William M. Colmer Visitor Center in Ocean Springs. Programs vary from 30 to 60 minutes in length and are free to the

By Dr. Mile Burnham Horticulturist Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Even though I always encourage growing your own vegetables, it is impossible to grow everything you need. Have you taken a good look at the vegetable display cases in the grocery stores recently? They're changing, not just in shape, color or arrangement, but in what they display.

You still find lettuce. radishes, green onions, peppers and the basics we've all come to expect, but more choices are available than before.

Fresh herbs are a good examparaley, garlic, hot peppers and occasionally ginger. Today you have fresh cilantro, dill, oregano, rosemary, thyme, mints, basil and others. You're not longer restricted to just dried herba in bottles and cans.

One of the biggest changes in fresh produce in recent years is the appearance and rapid expansion of "iresh cuts." The first fresh cut choices were bagged mixes in fresh chopped green cabbage, carrot scrapings and a little red cabbage for cole slaw. All you had to do was add the dressing.

Today, fresh cuts are taking over an increasing portion of the vegetable display. In addiple of this change. It wasn't so tion to cole slaw, fresh celery long ago that all you found was and carrot sticks, a vast array of prepared salads and salad-based meals are available as refrigerated fresh produce.

Fresh cuts make meals quicker and simpler because less time is spent in preparation. People working away from home now have the opportunity to stop at the grocery store for a prepared salad as a quick meal choice instead of only fast food hamburgers, chicken, tacos or

Many fast food places now offer their own salads which probably come in as fresh cut products.

A variety of prepared salads such as garden, gourmet, Caesar and spinach can be found in many markets. Their availability is sure to increase. The washed, chopped and ready to-munch saled greens offen are accompanied by crumeny, sec-soned croutons, saled dressing a fork and napkin to make a complete one-package meal.

Since variety is the name of the game, some of the salad mixes consist of a blend of iceberg, romaine, red cabbage, carrots and radishes. Another may have just butter lettuce and radicchio, while another just fresh spinach or romaine. You might find a blend of bay lettuces mixed with a variety of other tender greens, a blend of leaf lettuce and endive or a combination of escarole, endive and radiccho for a stronger flavored

While trimmed broccoli and cauliflower florets have been available for quite some time, fresh broccoli florets now are being combined in packaged meals such as cream of broccoli soup, stir fry broccoli, broccoli pasta salad and broccoli pasta with Alfredo sauce.

All the cook has to provide is the pot, liquid, meat when called for and a little time. Even the pasta is in the package.

The availability of fresh cut produce has expanded so rapidly and been so widely accepted that it has even moved into the children's market.

If your children won't eat salad, maybe they will when it's packaged just for a young person with ranch dressing, crunchy croutons, an appealing animal character on the package and a "collectible" toy in every bag. And, to appeal to Mom and Dad, a well displayed "no preservatives" label also is on the package.

Fresh produce is changing to make choices more appealing and easier to use for timelimited, hard-working people. Convenience is the name of the game. If these changes result in consumers eating more fresh vegetables, they are not only good for you but for the produce industry as well.

Smoke-Free Class of 2000 sponsors letter writing contest

The Smoke-Free Class of 2000 is sponsoring a letterwriting contest for seventh grade students to encourage them to become tobacco control advocates in their community.

Students are asked to research a tobacco issue of interest to them or their community and then write a letter on that topic requesting action from an elected official.

The contest encourages the students to "Use the Facts: Exercise Your Power' (the theme of the 1994-95 Smoke-Free Class) and become participants in the democratic process. The contest is open to all full-time students enrolled in the seventh grade for the 1994-95 school year.

Two winners in each state will receive a trip to attend the Smoke-Free Class of 2000 National Youth Ambassador Forum in Washington, D.C. June 10-14. The goal of the conference is to involve the students in plans to stimulate changes in federal, state and local tobacco control laws, regulations and policies to protect

Students and teachers can receive a flyer and other information with local contest guidelines and deadlines by calling the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345; American Heart Association, 1-800-AHA-USA1 or American Lung Association at 1-800-LUNG-USA.

The Smoke-Free Class of 2000 is a 12-year education and awareness campaign of the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association to meet former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's challenge to create a smoke-free generation by the year 2000. Each year the campaign reaches approximately two million schools with educational materials.

The Smoke-Free Class of 2000 is one of several joint efforts of the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association and American Lung Association. It is endorsed by more than a dozen national organizations.

To me the charts presented were very suspect as to their accuracy. Past experience with charts presented by VanDevender at public hearings has shown he usually gives no indication of where, when, how, or by whom, the data was gathered. This is particularly true when the charts show statistics from years before statistics were even recorded.

Some interesting ideas were presented as a way to lessen the impact of the proposed gill net ban on local commercial fishermen. One recreational group proposed a temporary recreational license fee increase. The extra fee would establish a fund from which commercial net fishermen would receive compensation for several years in an amount equal to the amount he claims for the sale of fish on this income tax.

The new director of the Department of Marine Resources, Earl Glade Woods, 57, is now on the job. The task he faces is tremendous. He has responsibility for the marine resources of the three Mississippi coastal counties, three of the fastest growing counties in the state.

According to Woods, his biggest task will be "how to allow managed development along the Coast while preserving our marine resource." He feels development is a fact and will continue to occur as long as population continues to increase.

Glade Woods brings to the job an extensive and impressive list of qualifications. He is a graduate of Mississippi State Univer-sity with schachelor's degree in electrical aggineering. A mas-ter's degree towas earned from the University of Utah in engineering administration. He has worked toward a master's of business administration degree at the University of Southern Mississippi. Additionally, he has numerous courses in environmental and marine science from Mississippi State Jniversity.

Woods brings a background of successful administrative experience to the Department of Marine Resources that should make DMR the envy of other states.

His business experience includes 15 years in marine environmental technical administration with the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and NASA. He has an additional 20 years experience in Aerospace research and development administration with NASA and the USAF plus private industry. If that were not enough background, he has administrative experience with the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS).

When asked about all the controversy that surrounded the old Bureau of Marine Resources, Woods said he has only been on the job a few days and not had a chance to "put his arms around the job." But, he did give a phrase that he said he liked to live by: "Rational people given equal information seldom disagree.'

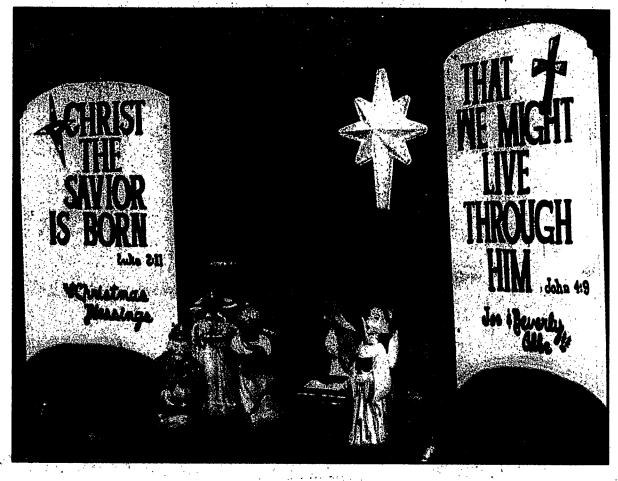

Glade Woods says he has a "keen interest in finding the optimum balance between protection of the environment and the development occurring along the Gulf Coast."

With his extensive knowledge of environmental research and development and his administrative background, Glade Woods seems to be exceptionally qualified to guide the future of the Department of Marine Resources into the 21st century.

Training promotes child care

By Camille Scales MSU Ag Communications

In Mississippi, 50 percent of working mothers have children under the age of 6, creating a critical need for quality childcare businesses.

State child-care providers recently received training to improve their businesses and meet the needs of working mothers in the state during a Child Care as a Business Workshop at Mississippi State University.

"We had three times as many applicants as we could accept, said Dr. Beth Duncan, extension home-based and entrepreneurial business specialist at "The positive response means the workshop most likely will be offered in the future."

Duncan said Mississippi families have a serious need for quality child care. Of the 150,800 children under the age of 6 in the state, only 42,422 are being cared for in a licensed 'Quality child care is a critical issue facing Mississippi families," Duncan said.

The workshop featured sessions conducted by extension specialists, MSU faculty and area business professionals designed to promote business awareness, marketing directions and management essentials.

Dr. Zoel Daughtrey, certified public accountant and professor of accountancy at MSU, said the biggest challenge facing childcare businesses is record keeping and reporting.

"As with any small business, the record keeping and reporting is very important in a childcare business because there are so many different entities you're accountable to," Daughtrey said. "There are multitudes of documenting and reporting transactions to do.

Dr. Everlyn Johnson, extension apparel and textiles specialist at MSU, spoke on advertising and promotion. Johnson informed the participants of steps to take when considering advertisements or promotions for their child-care businesses. "Sometimes if you can make people aware of a need they didn't know they had, then you can fulfill that need," Johnson said. "The best advertisement is a satisfied customer."

Dr. Jan Cooper Taylor, associate professor of home economics at MSU, presented a workshop session on parent relationships and communication

Taylor stressed the importance of regularity in the dayto-day routines of a child-care

"Confidentiality and trust are key factors in developing relationships with parents and children," Taylor said.

The Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service and the MSU home economics department sponsored the three-day event held on the MSU campus.

Kansas City, 32-Houston 16 The Chiefs, playing at home in a must-win situation, look like a sure bet against the lowly Oilers, but for what it's worth, Houston has won four of its last five against K.C. It's still a sure bet.

L.A. Raiders, 24-Seattle, 19 Attacking through the air, the Seahawks embarrassed the Raiders in September, 38-9. Since then Seattle has stayed on the ground, and that approach won't work well against L.A. this time around.

Miami, 29-Indianapolis, 21 Six weeks ago, the Dolphins needed — what else? — a late Dan Marino-led drive to set up a field goal that beat the Colts 22-21. With Miami psyched for the playoffs, the rematch won't be as close.

Philadelphia, 30—N.Y. Giants, 20 The Giants got off to a promising start when Dave Meggett led them past the Eagles in the first game of the season, 28-23. Philadelphia desperately needs to end its losing streak to New York at three.

Pittsburgh, 28—Cleveland, 22 In their first matchup in September, the Steelers won a hard-fought game from the Browns, 17-10. Pittsburgh, looking stronger every week, will beat Cleveland twice for the first time since '81.

San Diego, 26-N.Y. Jets, 23 The last time the Chargers met the Jets, in '91, S.D. was working on a 4-12 record and N.Y. won easily, 24-3. The Chargers were passing then and they're running now, but this won't be a runaway.

Washington, 17—Tampa Bay, 13
Two weeks ago, the Redskins made the news by being the Buccaneers' second straight victims, 26-21. It won't happen again, because Washington is not only mad but better on both sides of the ball.

Dallas, 33-New Orleans, 18 (Monday) Who can stop the Cowboys? Not the Saints, whose defense ranks right down there with Denver and whose passing game Dallas will stifle. The Cowboys beat N.O. 23-14 the last time they met, in '91.

HIGHLIGHTS

We're in the business of picking games right, but this Bowl season we're almost willing to get a couple of key games wrong if it might help fix the silly method by which the national champion is determined. If Nebraska beats Miami in the Orange Bowl and Penn State, our No. 1 team, beats Oregon in the Rose Bowl, the arguing over who deserves to be No. 1 will begin. It's an argument no one wins, and so it doesn't get us anywhere. Sadly, we may have reached the point where the interests of college football and its fans would be better served by the much louder and angrier debate that would ensue if both favorites lost. That's highly unlikely, but wouldn't it be the best argument yet for some system of col-

Of course, if one of the two remaining undefeated teams wins and the other loses, the choice for No. 1 is clear. But that lucky break wouldn't do the game much good, either, because those who oppose playoffs would be off the hook for another year. And it could happen. The Nittany Lions should have a relatively easy time with the Ducks, but Nebraska will have its hands full in the Orange Bowl, where the Hurricanes have won 62 of their last 63 games. So if you don't have a favoritie, root for or against both Penn State and Nebraska and chant along with us: We ... want ... playoffs. Our forecasting average held steady throughout the fall. We picked a total of 2,377 games, and got 1,756 of them right (with 35 ties), a percentage of .750. We close the season with our annual ranking of the top 20 college conferences, based on the average of our power quotients for the teams in each conference across the country. Why is Penn State our No. 1 team? Because it played in the nation's toughest conference. Here's the breakdown:

1.	Big Ten	95.7	11.	Mid-American	67.9
2.	Southeastern	95.6	12.	Southland	67.7
3.	Pacific-10	93.8	13.	Southern	65.0
4.	Big Eight	91.5	14.	Gateway Athletic	62.5
5.	Big East	89.7		Yankee	62.3
6.	Atlantic Coast	89.4	16.	North Central	58.5
7.	Southwest	86.9	17.	Gulf South	56.8
